

METHOD FOR SIMULTANEOUS BODY PART DISPLAY

Abstract of the disclosure

The regions of interest of images of both breasts of a patient are defined as regions of the image of minimal surface area and containing views of the breasts. These regions of interest are aligned for simultaneous display of the images. The display now allows simple and direct comparison of the images of both breasts, notably allowing immediate comparison of structural disorganisations within the two breasts.